

Patty Vollmar

Director Collaboration Services, Global IT
Colgate Palmolive Company

Patty Vollmar is a Senior Director at Colgate Palmolive. She has been with the company over 25 years with experience in Global Supply Chain, Procurement and Collaboration Services both on the commercial and IT side. While spending her career in the northeastern US, her global role has allowed for extensive global travel.

She loves working with people around the world, especially developing tools that allow global organizations to work more productively. This is important as work groups are located in different countries and travel budgets decrease. Patty is currently driving adoption of Google which is the project she lead in 2016 to migrate 28,000 people onto that platform.

Patty graduated with a BS in Supply Chain from Penn State and has a minor in Spanish from University of Salamanca.

Patty is a Girl Scout leader, and active in parent organizations with high school band and drama club. Her family (2 daughters, 18 and 14 and husband) enjoy camping, skiing, Maine and just about any beach.